at Lorenzo Walker Technical College

Sheridon Wright, Creative Director at the Hive, was asked to talk with students and give a presentation to Lorenzo Walker Technical College in February. He met with aspiring creatives in the Media Arts Department who are working towards earning degrees in their prospective majors and discussed some of the different opportunities available to them after graduation as well as the common adversities Art majors face when stepping out into the world beyond higher education.

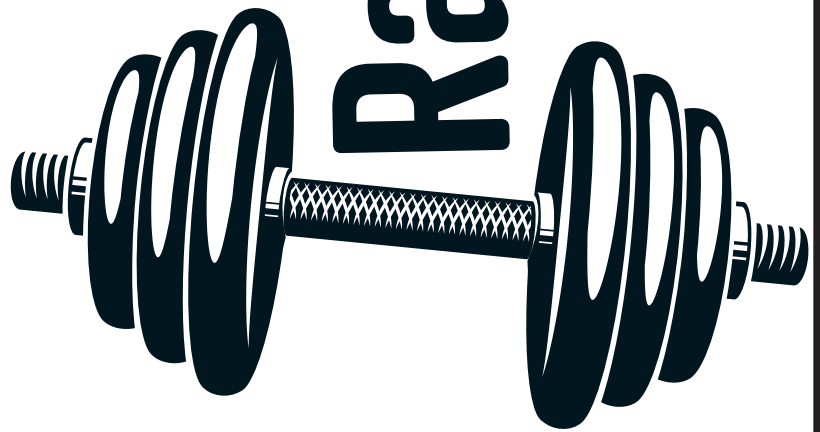

"It's important to be self aware and understand the skill set you are bringing to the table when you apply for different job positions. In many cases, an artist has to evolve and be willing to learn different mediums in order to be considered for mainstream careers in the Media Arts industry," Wright explained.

"Above all else, know your worth, be confident and if working in a creative field is truly something you want to pursue, continue to persevere no matter what challenges you're faced with."

Misfit Gym Rats

Gina Sisbarro and MOS employees James Cameron and Ryan Sullivan present a new original play April 3rd, 4th, and 5th called Misfit Gym Rats. This is Gina's fourth play that she has written, directed, and produced at Sisbarro Acting Studio and it is sure to be a hit. This play takes a turn from the beaten path Gina has made delving into the world of comedy rather than the dramatic pieces she has produced in the past. "There are probably going to be points where cast members miss their cues on stage because they can't hear over the audience laughing so hard!" Actor and MOS employee James Cameron stated.
